The Seminary Sixty-first Commencement Graduates A Class Of 156 Students Weekend Was Alive With Much Activity

The 61st commencement of Northfield Seminary, which after July first will be called the Northfield School for Girls, provided much activity during the weekend, of June 10, 11 and 12. During the last week of classes, the off time was filled with social affairs, the saying of goodbyes and the packing of trunks and packages.

DR. MIRA B. WILSON
Principal
Northfield Seminary

Formal events before the final curtain was rung down, began on Saturday with a program of much interest to both students and guests. There was a swimming exhibition at the gymnasium pool; a final chapel gathering; a reception at the home of Miss Wilson the Principal; and some group sessions. On Sunday morning early, a communion service was held at the chapel and Sunday evening was the organ recital by Edouard Nies-Berger, the noted artist, followed by the traditional lantern service. The baccalaureate sermon was Sunday morning in Sage Chapel by Dr. Mira B. Wilson, principal of the school.

Preaching on "New Values", she said, "Whether we welcome it or not, there is an urgency about life in 1944 not unlike that expressed in the first century by passages like 'Know ye not, that I must be about my Father's business' and we 'must work the works of Him that sent me while it is yet day: the night cometh when no man can work.'"

"There is no time to take out one's knitting," she continued, "nor is there time to do much experimenting with the second rate. God summons us to a more intensive weighing and treasuring and discarding of values than the pre-war time knew. The only course that can strengthen the chances for Christian civilization will have to be marked by fervent inclusions and courageous omissions."

Commencement exercises were Monday morning and a large audience filled Sage Chapel to capacity in addition to the graduating class. The diplomas were presented by Dr. Wilson, the Principal following the address by Dr. William E. Park, president of the Northfield Schools.

Speaking on "Triumphant Living" Dr. Park said, "Somebody once defined an educated person as one who is at home in the world. There is some truth in that definition. It means that an educated person is never cynical and disillusioned about the world, but willing to adjust himself to the world as it is. We all know this is a disappointing world to be living in. It is discouraging to be in a world torn apart by war and strife. And it is discouraging to contemplate the tremendous problems which all of us will be confronted with when the war is over."

"There are many intelligent writers today who think that this is the first time in time that people during a war have honestly feared the peace to come. However, there is no real reason for educated people to become cynical, and discouraged, and lose faith. The world has always been in a bad condition and probably always will be. Apparently God intended to place us in a world full of tribulation where we must struggle and work and hope."

Grow Greens and Eat Them For Nutritious Diet

If you don't like spinach, there are many other green, leafy vegetables which you can grow in your victory garden. But if none in the list that follows is to your liking, then something should be done about it.

Green, leafy, red and yellow vegetables are the vitamin-rich foods so essential to nutrition. They are rich especially in Vitamin A. At least one should be served on your table every day, and those who do not like them should eat them in spite of that, say the nutritionists.

Some green leafy vegetables can be served raw in salads, others are cooked, and among these are the greens so highly esteemed as spring tonics by our grandmothers, but did not know about vitamins, but did know that greens were healthful.

In 25 days from seed after planting you can be harvesting Tendergreen, a variety of mustard, which produces large green leaves which, like Swiss chard, can be cut from the plant without disturbing the root, to be followed immediately by another crop.

There are several varieties of mustard, maturing in 30 to 40 days, which are popular for greens. They have a pungent flavor which is especially popular in the southern states, where greens have been a dietary standby for generations. Most of the mustards will keep bearing until frost.

Spinach takes longer to mature—40 to 50 days—and does not like hot weather. It is harvested by pulling up the plant by the roots, so that one crop is all it yields. Sow just as soon as the ground can be worked, in rows a foot apart, and thin out to six inches between the plants. A crop for fall may be sown in July, and will find the cool autumn weather to its liking.

Swiss chard is a species of beet which produces an insignificant root, but luxuriant broad leaves, which have a distinctive flavor which many like better than other greens. Chard may be cut off at the ground, and the roots will send up a new crop of leaves several times during the summer. It is highly esteemed for young children during the hot weather when spinach is difficult to grow.

New Zealand spinach is not a spinach, but a tropical plant which botanists call tetragonia expansa. It should not be sown until the ground is fairly warm, and then it should be given plenty of room, 2 to 3 feet between plants. In the northern states it grows to remarkable size, so that a peck of greens can be picked from a single plant once a week until frost comes.

Garden sorrel is a hardy perennial which bears edible leaves considered by many to be delicious. It should be sown in drills eighteen inches apart, preferably in light shade, as hot sun is said to increase its acidity. The roots should be divided every four years.

To continue the greens program into the late fall and winter, sow in June seeds of kale or borecole. Transplant to rows with two feet between plants. It takes 110 days to bring plants to maturity, but frost improves the flavor and the plants continue to bear long after other greens have been killed.

Northfield Citizens Urged To Buy These Fifth War Loan Gets Good Start Here

Northfield will respond enthusiastically to the Fifth War Loan drive, said Chairman Frank W. Pearsall of the local War Finance committee to members who had gathered to consider and devise ways to get information into every home through publicity. Already reports received show that there is a steady demand for the bonds through the local postoffices and banks in the vicinity. Pupils of the public schools in their closing sessions before the summer vacation have liberally subscribed and the amount will be included in the Northfield initial report.

Through the co-operation of Spencer Bros., the Northfield schools, the Northfield hotel, the Vermont-Peoples National Bank and Mr. and Mrs. Hallam, a supplement has been printed to the Northfield Press on the War Loan. The quota for the state is $828,000,000 and of this $112,000,000 is set for E bonds purchasable by the individual. Northfield has been given a quota of this amount and the local committee expect that it will be met. It is not expected that a personal canvass will be necessary here, but the committee will send out a letter to former purchasers urging more buying.
